

Luminati Waycon moves factory

Mon 10th January, 2011 08:39am

South West-based acrylics manufacturer Luminati Waycon has moved into a new manufacturing base at Lee Mill Industrial Estate near Ivybridge, Plymouth.

Luminati Waycon designs and manufactures a range of acrylic products including display cases and cabinets, merchandising and point of sale systems, furniture, desks and IT accessories, photo frames, sign holders and cake stands.

Directors Steve Senior and John Gall purchased the business in May 2002. The company employs 35 employees and has a turnover of £2.1m.

John Gall, director, said: "This move to a purpose built manufacturing and show room facility at Lee Mill will enable us to continue to grow and develop a wider range of products and services."

Steve Senior, director, said; "Our marketing strategy has concentrated on a wide range of market sectors where added value can be made through bespoke design, product innovation and quality.

"Our display products help our customers sell products and services so we constantly need to be ahead of the game and offer them innovative products that work. We have often won back work from China from companies seeking to source locally, ethically and purchase in smaller batches with shorter lead times. Our business strategy allows clients to have a one stop shop that includes the design of products as well as manufacture."